Dear Carter's hiring team,

I'm reaching out about the Cloud Full Stack Developer position at Carter's. With over 4 years working with React, TypeScript, and AWS, I'm interested in helping build the technology that supports your retail operations and enhances the customer experience for families shopping for their little ones.

Why I'd be a good fit for this role:

AWS & Cloud Development: I've been working with AWS for 3+ years, using many of the same services Carter's relies on - Lambda, S3, API Gateway, CloudFormation, and EC2. At Avalara, I work on cloud infrastructure that handles millions of daily transactions, so I understand the importance of building reliable, scalable systems.

Full Stack & API Development: I've built complete web applications from scratch, including an e-commerce platform with product catalogs, payment processing, and inventory management. This retail experience taught me how important it is to create systems that work smoothly for both customers and business operations.

Business Collaboration: Throughout my career, I've worked closely with business teams to gather requirements and translate them into technical solutions. Whether it was working with international teams at Siemens or partnering with stakeholders at Avalara, I enjoy the process of understanding business needs and finding the right technical approach.

Problem Solving & Process Improvement: My background in critical systems engineering has given me a different perspective on reliability and optimization. I naturally look for ways to improve processes and automate repetitive tasks - something that seems to align well with Carter's focus on innovation and efficiency.

What draws me to Carter's is the opportunity to work on "store of the future" technologies and help improve inventory optimization. The retail industry is evolving quickly, and I'd enjoy contributing to solutions that make shopping easier for families while helping the business run more efficiently.

I'd love to discuss how my technical skills and passion for great user experiences can contribute to your team.

Thank you for considering my application.

Sincerely,

Wagner Taiatella
